Answer Key:

- Luxembourg: Widely recognized as the richest country globally, its wealth per capita consistently exceeds $128,000 to $152,000. Its economy thrives as a premier global financial and investment hub in Europe.
- Singapore: With a GDP per capita of about $100,000 to $156,000 (when adjusted for purchasing power), it serves as Asia's primary financial, trade, and commercial powerhouse.
- Ireland: Sitting at a GDP per capita well over $130,000, Ireland has experienced rapid economic growth. This is largely driven by its status as a major global hub for multinational technology and pharmaceutical companies.
- Qatar: Bolstered by its massive natural gas and petroleum reserves, Qatar maintains a GDP per capita of over $121,000. Its petrodollar wealth translates into an extremely high standard of living for its citizens.
- Switzerland: Known for exceptional wealth, the country averages over $118,000 per person. It boasts a highly stable economy built on elite banking, precision engineering, and high-value luxury manufacturing.
